Allocator, the data platform for the investment management industry, hosted its Investors Choice Awards 2017 Gala for the EMEA & APAC region in London last week. Among the night's winners was Carlisle's own Luxembourg Life Fund, which brought home the award for Multi-strategy Fund – Long Term Performance.

The awards were announced by Karen Tso, anchor of CNBC Squawk Box. Karen kept the managers on their toes with a few surprise questions she had up her sleeve. Over 300 people, including over 150 investors, attended the sold out event, which was held at the Dorchester Hotel in London.

"Our clients invest for the medium to longer term, and use Allocator to help them understand their fund investments and potential fund investments. The awards, which are judged through the Allocator portal, reflect the holistic approach our clients have to their allocations" said David Tawil, co-founder of Allocator.

This year, award finalists are being honoured and the winners announced at two gala dinners in New York and London.
